

Memo to Mighty Members Tip #165

WATCH: Dr. Thomas Szasz

July 27, 2023

Who better to explode the “mythology” of psychiatry than a pre-eminent psychiatrist?

Dr. Thomas Szasz believes we are experiencing a “psychiatrization of the culture.”

In my recent blog post, “I Don’t Like That Baby”: Homeopathy and Behavioral Issues, I felt it important to share Dr. Szasz’s philosophy with you, my Mighties.

In this short video, Dr. Szasz reveals the underpinnings of psychiatry. “It’s not science. It’s politics and economics.”

Indeed, the psychotropic drugs advertised on television for unproven chemical imbalances in the brain often cause serious conditions — even long-term ones.

However, as we know, homeopathic medicines for emotional, mental and behavioral disorders are gentle and polite. Homeopathics aren’t a product of politics and economics. Quite the opposite. They have been shown through clinical observation to nudge the body into addressing the underlying condition without the patented “behavior control” of pharmaceutical intervention.

I urge you to watch this short video. If the subject is of particular interest to you, perhaps go on to watch other videos from Dr. Szasz. This is so big, in his words, “It boggles the mind!”

Also, my team has uploaded my latest Mighty Musing, Reason the Twenty-First, from Dr. James Compton Burnett’s “Fifty Reasons for Being a Homeopath.” And don’t forget, you can follow along as I read through the Internet Archive (as I shared in Memo #163).

Stay Mighty!
